Subject: IG Survey (August 1960) of the CIA Training Program

The subject report is a comprehensive, balanced, and generally realistic survey of developments to date and of existing problems and considerations in Agency training. OBI would concur in principle in the recommendations for establishing a senior officers training program with the objectives outlined (p 154), and for a mid-career training program (p 149). Since there are many aspects of recruitment, training, and career-management criteria which as yet are uncrystallized and/or unresolved, and such a policy as recommended in (a) on p 92 might well require latitude to provide for, among other things, such special skills as graphics specialists, recommendations (b) and (d) on p 92 are sound as a basis for organized evolution.
